

Located beneath the Shycraft furniture showroom in Sydney's Darlinghurst, Gihara hair and beauty, designed by Sydney practice Cullen Fong, features a 20-seat cutting and colouring area, reception, offices and a flexible studio space. A garage entry allows VIP clients to be chauffeured into the salon.

Joe Gihara is one of Sydney's most sought-after hairstylists, with a large client base in the fashion and entertainment industry, and is best-known for his styling work on the feature film The Matrix. The salon design brief was reflective of Gihara's ambition to re-evaluate the hair and beauty industry in Australia. In addition to experiencing a unique level of professional attention to their hair and beauty requirements, it was also essential that the design approach allowed clients to appreciate a unique spatial experience while in the salon.

The sheer size and volume of the new concrete basement tenancy proved an essential element, which allowed Cullen Fong to create this point of difference. Being 800 square metres in area, the space is studded with enormous occasional columns that assist in defining the main departments of the salon.

Cullen Fong have created a focal nexus for the salon within the suspended 'hall of mirrors', which forms the cutting and colouring area. The refinement of detail in this area contrasts against the otherwise raw industrial space, which retains the spatial and textural sense of its former life as a garage.

The chair and mirror assemblies have been designed as pure sculptural entities and are arranged in two large sweeping arcs. Each assembly varies slightly in its orientation, the mirrors giving alternate reflections of the salon. Walking between the two arcs of mirrors has a kaleidoscopic effect, as images merge and repeat themselves. From certain angles, the image of a chair in the suspended mirror complex the form of the chair on the opposite side, a cunning yet subtle technique.

The changing orientation in the assemblies also has the effect of enhancing the visual and acoustic privacy between clients. The bases of the splayed cutting chairs and circular steel tables are cast into a concrete floor. The white curved forms of the chairs are read against a rich dark brown wall at the rear of the space.

The basin area, towards the rear of the salon, features overhead industrial hose reel assemblies and a suspended polycarbonate wall that screens off the office area. This type of suspended screen has been used elsewhere in the salon to address privacy between areas while still giving an impression of the activity behind. The polycarbonate element is provided by a clip-together proprietary factory-welding system.

The main lighting to the salon is achieved via basin uplights, which dramatically illuminate each column capital. The cutting and colouring area is illuminated via an industrial cable tray with recessed downlights and fluorescent uplighting. Gihara is both spatially dramatic and cunningly detailed. Cullen Fong have succeeded in creating a salon that demotes the sense of theatrical procession in styling. Patrons will at once feel enveloped by the industrial scale of this space, while at the same time being subtly touched by moments of spatial and personal reflection. EMC
